Tass Says West Foments Soviet-Tito Rift

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, Sept. 26 (NYT).--The Soviet Union charged the Western press today with playing up the expose of a pro-Soviet Stalinist party in Yugoslavia in order to foment a dispute between Moscow and Belgrade and to disrupt their friendly relations.

The discovery and trial of 27 pro-Soviet Communists operating an illegal party, mainly in Montenegro, and the alleged involve-ment of the minister of the Soviet Embassy in Belgrade have constituted the sharpest setback tempts by Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist party leader, to improve relations with Presi-

The Yugoslavs have reportedly brought up the matter privately at the highest levels, but today's commentary distributed by Tass for use in the Soviet press to-morrow was the first time that Moscow has reacted publicly to charges of intervention in Yugoslay internal affairs. Its appearance indicated how sensitive the Kremlin has become to this issue. Warning Is Seeu Aithough directed nominally against the Western press, the commentary also seemed intended as a warning to elements in Yugoslavia to tone down the controverey. Officially, the Yugoslav government and party have made no charges against Moscow in public but there have been a number of high-level press leaks pointing a finger at the Russians. So far, well-placed Communist sources report, the Soviet leader-ship bad told the Yugoslavs privately that Soviet intelligence agents were not involved and has sought to attribute the whole affair to uncontrollable Yugoslav cmigré elements. The Russians have let it be known privately that they regard the episode as part of the tense political maneuvering for the leadership of Yugoelavia after President Tito's departure from

"They are preparing for a new era," a Soviet source told a Westerner, "so such things are understandable."

Tas treated the affair as a "concoction" of the Western press but without actually denying any of the charges being leaked by some high Yugoslav Communist sources in Belgrade that the pro-Statinist group had some connections with the Soviet Union. Reports from Belgrade had mentioned links between the Montenegro group to Vlado Dabcevic, er partisan who fied to the Soviet Union after having served 10 years in jail in Yugoslavia and to now lives in Belgium, and to it to leaks earlier this year, based on a Communist defector's report, that Moscow had contingency plans for military intervention in Yugoslavia in the event of a crisis there.

Talks Set To Heal Farm Rift In EEC

From Wire Dispaiches BRUSSELS, Sept. 26 .- The agriculture ministers of the nine Common Market nations decided today to meet Wednesday in Luxembourg to try to defuse the crisis caused by West Germany's rejection of a provisional agreement on increasing by 5 per cent the guaranteed prices for EEC farm products.

Common Market sources said that France and West Germany also have suggested that foreign ministers attend the meeting to guarantee that the problem bo ebeted on a high political level, not just in technical terms. The seven other EEC nations probably will agree, they said.

In Paris, Prime Minister Jacques Chirac said he was "sure" the West German move was "the result of a misunderstanding" and that the price rise would take place as planned.

Mr. Chirac said that he was "convinced" that, after the meeting in Luxembourg on Wednes-day, "this misunderstanding will be cleared up and the 5 per cent rise in farm prices can come into effect as planned Oct. 1." "Clarification Seen

He said that the French government interpreted the West German action "as a request for clarifications." In Bonn, Chancellor Helmut

French Agriculture Minister Christian Bonnet, who with Mr. leaders in Paris, warned that if the problem was not cleared up next week's meeting, French government would hold further talks with farm representatives and meet their demands for tax relief and other financial aid.

However, under pressure from Bonn, the government refrained for the moment from offering French farmers special financial benefits that could be construed as a violation of the EEC Common Agricultural Policy.

The crisis goes beyond whether farm-support prices should go up by 5 per cent, as the ministers provisionally agreed here last week, or 4 per cent, as the West German government is demanding now.

The issue, according to both Common Market and West German officials here, is the result of years of German frustration over having to pay a disproportionate share of Common Market bills, particularly in agriculture. West Germany, they said, is re-fusing to bankroll Europe and is backing the refusal with political

CAIRO, Sept. 26 (UPI).—Egypt will agree to a renewal of the mandate of the United Nations peace-keeping force stationed in the Sinal but refuses to end the state of war with Israel pending a complete solution of the Mid-

He turned over the premiership to Abdel Aziz Hegazy, his first deputy premier for the last five months. Mr. Hegazy, 51, an economist

State Department spokesman Robert Anderson again said that he still did not have details on the meeting but described it as "an informal discussion of the international economic situation in which "no decisions would be made. No action is going to come out of it." The ministers participating, he emphasized, will be in Washington for the annual meeting of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund. Other sources said the meeting would be devoted to the oil-price problem, which has not been eased through the normal level of diplomatic-economic and mone-tary negotiations.

Various Responses

There has been widespread States may turn to various kinds of retaliation, ranging from controls on the investments of the oil-producing nations to raising the price of weapons or food that the United States sells to them. "Tough tactics are not our primary aim at this stage," a

U.S. specialist said. Any such action, even if it could be effective, which is questionable, this source said, would jeopardize such pri-mary U.S. interests as achieving a final settlement of the Arab-Israeli war and rebound against other portions of overall American foreign policy.

The heightened alarm in the American government over oil pricing, several sources noted, finally represents agreement inside the government that supply and demand cannot begin to meet the challenge, since the oil nations have simply cut back production. The United States was far too complacent that the end of the Arab oil embargo would resolve the problem, and hopes that "Arab moderation" would produce lower prices have dim-

The Ford administration admittedly has no set of plans which it can put into effect on its own to produce a solution. American officiais are conscious that other nations participating in the meeting, and Japan most of all, are far more vulnerable than the United States to pressure on their oil supplies. They also have their own relations to preserve with Arab nations. French Foreign Minister Jean Sauvagnargues, for example, said on Tuesday that "the use of Common Market sources said the West German Cabinet had been ready to approve the provisional deal when a report arrived from Paris that Mr. Chirac was planning to offer new subsidies to farmers, in addition to those granted during the sum-mer. LISBON, Sept. 26 (AP) .- The civil government of the city of Lisbon today declared as "un-authorized" a rally scheduled to support the President, Gen. Antonio de Spinola. But the Information Ministry denied that a final decision had been made and said the rally might be held if the organizers applied for and received permission. The rally incident may be re-

The appropriation is to cover the 11 months from Mr. Nixon's resignation last month until the end of the fiscal year next June 30. Last week, the House Appropriations Committee cut the $850,000 requested to $398,000, but Sen. Montoya felt that it should be cut further.

Two Segments

The presidential transition period is divided into segments dur-ing the first year after the incumbent leaves office. The first six months form a transition period to sort ont records, answer mail and perform similar official tasks. Then the law providing a permanent office and staff takes effect, but the appropriation is limited to $96,000 annually.

The $328,000 approved today by the Senate panel would cover both the transition and the subsequent period.

Yesterday, Sen. Montoya said that he would seek to have language written into the money bill to limit the now unlimited number of federal employees that may be furnished free to the former President during his first six months in private life.

Sen. Montoya held a second hearing yesterday to ask General Services Administrator Arthur Sampson why that much money was needed to support Mr. Nixon for a year.

Sen, Montoya had asked the advice of Controller General Elmer Staats on the request for Mr. Nixon and received an opinthat Mr. Nixon did qualify for benefits as a former president, including a $60,000 annual pension, despite the circumstances of his resignation. But Mr. Staats suggested that Sen. Montoya "carefully" review the list of federal employees detailed to Mr.

"It is not apparent to us," wrote Mr. Staats, how a butler, maid and three military drivers "would be used by a former presup his affairs."

However, it was unclear whether the administration had been able to head off further setbacks in the foreign aid field.

The Senate majority leader, Mike Mansfield of Montana, said after the meeting that the aid bill would be brought to the Senate floor for debate next week. In its present form, the measure contains the most far-reaching restrictions and deepest cuts ever

Mr. Kissinger also talked on Tuesday with Turkish Foreign Minister Turhan Gunes and scheduled additional meetings with both Mr. Gunes and Mr. Mayros after his return to New York on Sunday night. But neither the Greeks nor Turks have publicly asked Mr. Kissinger to intervene.

Greek hostility toward the United States developed during the Turkish invasion because Mr. Kissinger failed to prevent the in-vasion and then failed to check the Turkish advance. There were anti-American demonstrations in Athens and other Greek cities.

Convention. The police moved in after officials repeatedly warned the crowd to disperse. The warnings were drowned out by the shouts Frelimo slogens and songs of the African National Congress, which is banned in South Africa, Stones and bottles were thrown at the authorities just before the police attacked with dogs.

According to Judge Elliott, Cal-ley's trial judge could issue care-ful and conscientious guidelines and orders to witnesses forbidding them to talk with the news media before the trial, but the up to the level of skills of the best people," he said. The delegation came away with half a trunk full of samples of Chinese plant varieties, Dr. Wortman said, including 30 to 35, varieties of rice seed. Plant goneticists had been eager to get plant specimens from China. The delegation, which was sponsored by the Committee on Scholarly Communication with the Peo ple's Republic of China, left with the hope that its visit would open the way to regular ex-

Dr. Wortman said he was surprised by the strides the Chinese had made in breeding and disseminating new varieties of dwarf rice similar to the socalled "miracle rice" that was developed at the International Rice Research Institute in Los Banos, the Philippines. The director of the institute, Dr. Nyle Brady, was a member of the elegation.

Plant scientists at the Grain Crops Research Institute near Canton told the visitors that they had procured samples deearly as 1967, which is when those varieties were starting to come into general use in Southeast Asia. But the Americans were told that the varieties developed in the Philippines had proved to have a growing season that was 20 to 30 days too long for Chinese conditions. The varieties that the visitors found in widespread use all seemed to have been locally developed.

The American scientists expressed one reservation. Large numbers of researchers had been sent to work in the fields in recent years, they found, with the result that the laboratories appeared to be neglected.

High-Yield Crops Fail to Alter Asian Style

By Victor McElheny

LOS BANOS, the Philippines, Sept. 26 (NYT).—Studies in half a dozen Asian countries show that the introduction of high-yielding crops is not making the rich richer and the poor poorer, as many social scientists had predicted

It was predicted that highyield wheat and rice would favor mechanization of farms, drive labor off the land, concentrate land holdings and generally heighten social and economic inequities

However, studies summarized this month at the International Rice Research Institute here showed that the green revolution, which has spread the new varieties through much of Asia since 1968, has exerted little pressure toward enlarging or mecha-nizing farms The survey, conducted in 1971-72 by 30 social scientists from research centers and universities

Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines, covered 2,400 farms in more than 30 villages in those

According to Randolph Barker and Teresa Anden of the institute's Department of Agricultural Economics, the survey found that the size of farms and the form of tenure had "not changed dramatically since the introduction of the modern varieties."

Furthermore, although more machinery, fertilizers and pesticides were used as output and income grew, more than half the farms adopting the new technology used more hired labor from within the village. Forty per cent used more family labor and 30 per cent hired extra labor from outside the village. "The villages where labor-say-ing technology had been most widely adopted since the introduction of modern varieties also reported the largest number of farmers with increased employment of family and hired labor, pear to have been more than offset by labor requirements due to the new technology."

Recent estimates are that the new varieties of rice are planted on 40 million to 50 million acres in Asian nations outside Chinaabout 20 per cent of the region's rice land. New wheat varieties have spread even further, to an estimated 30 per cent of the region's wheat acreage.

Whether this adoption of the new varieties in less than a decade constitutes success is vig-orously disputed. Some agricultural technologists said that the rapid spread of the new grain types showed that Asian farmers are eager to adopt them.

But other observers said that cultivation of the new varieties has been hindered by ancient social inequalities, which are proving difficult to overcome. They said that glowing predictions in the late 1960s of rapid movement in Asia toward self-sufficiency in food have proven false.

stratosphere by a nuclear war could wipe out the ozone layer. Because certain wavelengths of ultraviolet light from the sua break down molecules essential to life, it is believed that land life did not emerge until development of the ozone layer, late in the earth's history. The lethal wavelengths cannot penetrate water. The prevalent concern, however, is not over total loss of the ozone, which is broken down and restored in a complex sequence of day and night chemical reactions. Rather, it is a fear of a depletion large enough to cause widespread skin cancer and other

Furthermore, because ultra-violet absorption by ozone con-tributes substantially to upper air heating, radical reduction of such heating could alter climates,

Ozone is a gas whose molecules are formed of three oxygen atoms instead of the two that are paired in ordinary oxygen. It develops where sunlight has split mole-cules of ordinary oxygen, provid-ing individual atoms that can merge to convert two-atom mole-cules into the three-atom ozona molecule.

Freon Is Trade Name

The Harvard calculations were made by Dr. Michael McElroy, professor of atmospheric science, and Dr. Steven Wofsy, an atmospheric physicist. They found that, even if dispersal of aerosol propellants and other such gases, widely known under the trade name Freon, is halted as soon as practicable, depletion of the ozone layer by 1990 could reach 5 per cent.

They consider a halt by the end of this decade to be the earliest plausible time, in view of political and commercial considerations. As others have pointed ont, the effect will continue for some time after a cutoff because the gas, which is at sea level, must work its way up into the stratosphere,

If, according to the Harvard scientists, the cutoff is delayed until the effect on the ozone layer, when the depletion level reaches 10 per cent, becomes indisputable, the consequences could be more

Basing their calculations un a relatively conservative estimate of an annual increase of 10 per cent in the release of the gases, they predict that the depletion will not level off until the year 2000. By then, they believe, the ozone laver will have been reduced by I4 to 15 per cent.

If the release of Freon conmues to increase by 21 per cen a year, as has recently been the case for the acrosol propellants, the ozone level will be down 7 per cent by 1984 and 30 per cent by 1994. A cutoff in 1937 would modify the effect to a maximum depiction, in 1995, of 21 per cent In all cases, recovery would be slow since there are no chemical reactions that remove such gases from the air. In an independent analysis. three University of Michigan scientists have concluded that, by 1935 or 1990, chlorine derived from the atmosphere's Freen content. will have become the dominant factor in ozone breakdown. This report, by Dr. Ralph Cice-rone, Dr. Richard Stolarski and

Dr. Stacy Walters, appears in the new issue of the journal Science.

Congressman Who Released CIA-Chile Data Is Under Fire

By Seymour M. Hersh

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (NYT).

—A House Armed Service subcommittee has begun a proceed-ing that could lead to disciplinary charges against Rep. Michael Harrington for his release of secret Central Intelligence Agency testimony on Chile.

Rep. Harrington, D., Mass., was questioned for nearly two hours yesterdsy by members of the Armed Services Intelligence subcom-mittee about his alleged violation of House rules in preparing and distributing a summary of the testimony of William Colby. director of Central Intelligence.

in that testimony, presented to the subcommittee on April 22. Mr. Colby disclosed that the CIA had been authorized by the Nixon administration to spend clan-destinely more than $8 million hetween 1970 and 1973 in an effort to make it more difficult for Chilean President Salvador Allende to govern.

Rep. Harrington was permitted to review the transcript in June.

In a memorandum made available yesterday, the intelligence subcommittee said that a New York Times dispatch of Sept. Harrington had not received permission to make further use of the testimony, the memorandum said, "it appears evident that a direct violation" of House rules regarding such testimony was involved. Rep. Harrington was known even before the hearing to be under sharp criticism from senior members of the House and Senate Armed Services Committee which have responsibility for supervising the CIA.

In a telephone interview yesterday, Rep. Harrington expressed dismay at what he termed the subcommittee's intention to avoid conducting a full inquiry into the Chilean situation.

Waving Fingers at the Gale

For today's instant communication is the instant simplification that goes with it. When President Ford and Mr. Kissinger bore down on the very tough problem posed by global inflation—and the part played in it by arbitrary increases in the price of oil -it was promptly dubbed, by the instant analysts, a "get tough" policy. And the response, from, among others, the Shah of Iran, visiting in faraway Australia, was not to what the President and the secretary of state said, but to how their remarks had been interpreted. "No one can wave a finger at us," said the Shah, "because we will wave a finger back."

Waving fingers to still a global economic gale is about as effective as whistling for a wind in a calm. The developing o'll-producing nations have a case, and the Shah made it, sketchily, in his interview. The President of Venezuela has made it at greater length and with rather more plausibility in advertisements directed toward the American public. The case goes back to the crux of the matter: the terms of

Producers of all raw materials have been very largely at the mercy of world market prices for their commodities. This has been tempered at times by various international cartel arrangements, as in sugar and coffee, and differing forms of local control have affected the price of other foodstuffs. Least affected by actual price-fixing have been in-

One of the penalties the world must pay dustrial products in a highly competitive market. Yet the costs of those products have risen, largely through demand both among the industrialized and developing nations, and it is the latter who have been most severely affected.

To reduce these diverse and complex factors in the terms of trade to a rational basis will be far from easy. Lowering prices for industrial products does not only require shaving profits-and thereby reducing incentives and capital for investment-but lowered wages as well, so long as energy and raw material costs are fixed, or increase, And that, as the current election campaign in Britain will probably make clear, creates a very dangerops political situation. France is approaching its energy problem bravely, but there is little indication that its course will reduce the costs of its products. There is no facile answer to the questions posed by terms of trade in unilateral action by any

That answer can only be supplied by what the President and Mr. Kissinger advocate: International action that will take the interests of all into account. But in the meanwhile, oil prices, set by the world's most effective cartel, are adding to the confusion. making both manufactured goods and food more expensive for everyone-including the oil producers. The Shah may wave his finger at that, but if he hopes Iran will be more than a big off well, he must take it into account.

Détente

No one is going to oppose the ideal of Soviet-American détente, in its pure meaning, any more than one would willingly choose a world of tension and hostility in preference to a "generation of peace." The issue is whether the pursuit of détente is being wisely conducted, with proper regard for fundamental interests and full realization of pitfalls as well as rewards,

Secretary of State Kissinger's long-promised testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week provided a convenient summation of the sound conceptual arguments which he has developed in a series of statements over recent years.

He gave needed emphasis to the point that détente is a continuing process, a dynamic relationship, not a state of grace that at a given time will be finally achieved, signed and sealed, permitting the two superpowers . to move on to other things. Détente is a pattern of mutual behavior that arises from To be effective, in short, détente must give each side something that it wants.

The chief reservation about the policy of détente, as conceived by Mr. Kissinger under two presidents now, is that this country may find itself settling for minimal tangible benefit for itself in pursuit of a desirable abstraction, while the Soviet leadership successfully extracts real concessions in return for empty lip service.

Nowhere is this danger more clearly raised than in Secretary Kissinger's discussion of expanding trade relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. "The significance of trade . . . is inflated out of all proportion," he said, when political concessions—on Soviet emigration policy or other matters—are demanded in exchange.

It is difficult to talk with a single Soviet official these days without learning that, far from being inflated out of proportion, trade is the single most important component in detente, as viewed from Moscow. Easing of nuclear tensions, formal recognition of the European status quo-these are desired goals of Soviet foreign policy; but the desperate, driving impulse of détente is access to Western advanced technology.

The broadest criticism to be made of the detente policy as so far implemented is that the extent of the political cost which the Russians are willing to pay for this access has scarcely even been tested in American diplomacy.

Mr. Kissinger argues that this country's bargaining power is limited, for the technology the Russians so desire is available as well from other countries as the United States. True in principle, perhaps, but demonstrably false in the recent years' experience of frustrated Soviet trade missions around the world. The dimensions of scale in the Soviet economy are so vast, the capacity of the Western industrial worldexcluding the United States - so small by comparison, that only this country can begin to provide the massive capacity which Moscow requires.

Even the working procedures on the American side of the trade bargaining process can the contrary. While the Soviets envisage their many transactions in the broad context of political and economic needs, the American side has too often been content to let private entrepreneurs make their own deals on a purely commercial basis. If the government finally moves in to consider these transactions from a national interest viewpoint, it may be too late to matter.

The danger of détente as it has been pursued, therefore, is that the United States may get an eloquently expressed design for interrelationship, while the Russians get a new generation of computers Compounding this imbalance, principles of behavior-however solemnly agreed—can be readily revoked, technological knowledge once disclosed can never be withdrawn.

Many in the executive branch as well as the Congress are well aware of these dangers. It is their responsibility to restrain an enthusiastic political leadership in the White House and State Department from succumbing to the abstract desirability of superpower détante, and insist that every single economic and political engagement with the Soviet Union be studied for its measure of mutual benefit, on its own merits.

The overwhelming (307 to 90) approval by drawals that will make fruitful negotiations the House of a binding cutoff in military aid to Turkey until "substantial progress" is made toward a Cyprus settlement dramatizes American revulsion against the massive Turkish aggression on the island. The action was also aimed at forcing administration compliance with laws that mandate such a cutoff when a recipient country misuses American military assistance.

Secretary of State Kissinger warned Congress that this move would be "destructive" of his efforts to advance a solution for Cyprus, but the exact opposite seems more plausible. Washington will now find it very difficult to maintain anything like the normal flow of military aid unless Turkeycurrently the strongest party by far in the dispute-will demonstrate greater willingness to order the troop and territorial with-possible. Mr. Kissinger is now in a stronger position to make that point than he was before the House voted

One hopeful development is an indication from the Turks that the negotiations between leaders of the two Cyprus communities should move on from the agreement on prisoner exchange and strictly humanitarian matters to issues of political substance. These talks can continue even while Greece and Turkey are preoccupied with their election campaigns.

Prospects for a Cyprus settlement and solutions for other combustible Greek-Turkish questions-including those involving oil drilling rights, territorial waters and air space in the Aegean - will be greatly enhanced if both countries emerge from the elections with strong majority governments. He added the caveat that he thought it would be dangerous to abolish "certain types of these activities."

Another public expression of Klasinger's views on interference in other countries was President Nixon's speech of last June 5, warning against too strong American support for the cause of Soviet Jews and dissenters. The voice was the voice of Nixon, but the hands were surely of Kissinger:

We would not welcome the intervention of other countries in our domestic affairs, and we expect them cooperative when we seek to intervene directly in theirs. We cannot gear our foreign policy to transformation of other societies? While opposing intervention in behalf of freedom in the Soviet Union, we now know, Kissinger presided over a program of sub-version that belped turn Chile from democracy to tyranny. # Mideast 'Commitment'

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON.—The idea of sorting out and reducing U.S. foreign commitments is such a firm part of the post-Vietnam conventional wisdom that it comes as something of a shock-but, on reflection, a useful and encouraging one—to be warned that the Mideast is one place where American commitments may have to be increased.

Indeed, as set forth by Harvard latest issue of Foreign Affairs magazine, it's already happening The Syrian-Israeli and Egyptian-Israeli troop disengagement ac-cords were brought into being by American commitments to provide aid and support to the local parties and to police the accords.

"Additional and increasingly weighty American commitments will have to be made, Safran says in his article entitled "Engage-ment in the Middle East," to move negotiations forward on the much more difficult substantive

Bridle

At the word "commitment," to be sure, many Americans instinctively bridle. To them it means involvement trouble over-reach ing, troops, war, Vietnam.

To Safran, however, and to Secretary of State Henry Kis-singer, whose Mideast policy he admires, "commitment" has a contrary, positive aspect: to pro-vide a mutually agreeable link and cement between the parties and, without giving either side an advantage in preparation for war, to give both sides incentives and channels to move toward a

To judge by the record so far, this is a popular course for Americans. With virtually none of the sharp debate that still marks deliberations on Vietnam, the Congress has accepted the troop disengagement accords and voted the substantial sums of aid requested to implement them. To an extent that few could have foreseen, popular partisanship in the Arab-Israeli dispute has yielded to the consensus that support for both sides is in their mutual interest and in the American interest, too.

Ray of Light

This is a ray of light in a dark sky, one not adequately appreciated. Kissinger's simtle diplomacy has taken the popular spotlight, but for the long haul you need a policy supported by Congress—surely Vletnam taught all of us that and Kissinger's Mideast strategy seems both to require and to earn such support in a way that could not be imagined if the policy aimed exclusively at either the security of Israel or the assurance of Arab oil,

There is no reason to believe, by the way, that Gerald Ford's accession to the presidency has altered the essentials of this

Not so long ago the guiding principle of American global policy, or at least the guiding rhetoric, lay in the softly comforting Nixon doctrine, whose promise it was to ease the security burden of friendly states from American shoulders onto their own. As Mr. Nixon no doubt knew, Americans were aching to hear that their retreat from a pertain kind of activist world leadership would leave our friends as well as ourselves better off.

The emerging Mideast truth is. however, that a hands-off policy is out of the question. It is hard to think of any similar situation where all the parties to a dispute were so eager to involve the United States in its settlement. If in Vietnam we were a large part of the problem, in the Mideast we are a large part of the solution. This is a heavy charge to us but it is a tribute and a source of leverage too.

Permanent Part

So it is that, while the United States is seeking to reduce its responsibilities in many other parts of the world, it is consciously increasing its role overallthough not in the crucial sense of military participation—in the Mideast and is making itself a virtually permanent part of the political furniture of that region.

No one can fairly say there are no dangers for the United States. The rationale for expanding American commitments in the new flux is to keep those dangers within bounds. It means we are building ourselves into an uncertain future, but the alternative -the replacement of the American restraining hand with a Soviet manipulative hand—seems

In the past Kissinger has shied away from acknowledging that the United States is becoming "guarantor" of a Mideast settlement. In this matter Safran finds him excessively defensive. The administration would be better advised to stress its "mounmental" interests in the region "instead of minimizing the commitments that would serve them," Sofran argues. "American weelth and power and American intelligeuce and idealism bave sektom had a worthier object."

The industrial dimension of agriculture—and the energy component-is increasingly important even in developing nations. It involves the use of heavy machinery and, most important, fertilizer.

One billion people—a quarter of the world's population—is fed by the extra crop yields that fertilizers produce. In recent years India became virtually self-sufficient in wheat thanks to a new grain that is very dependent on fertilizer. But most important fertilizer is nitrogen, and much of it comes from natural gas and petroleum. This year India is suffering a onemillion-ton fertilizer shortage, in large measure because oil produc-tion has been cut and because soaring fertilizer costs caused the U.S. government to restrict fertilizer exports. (Even with a partially protected supply, U.S. farmers this year will spend 50 per cent more—nearly $2 fallion more—on fertilizer than they spent last year.)

India Loses

For every 15-cent pound of fertilizer that India lacks, India loses 10 pounds of wheat. This year's fertilizer shortage will cost India 10 million tons of grain-a year's supply for 50 million In-

Americans use three million tons of fertilizers on lawns, rose gardens, nonpleatic football fields. neteries and for other ornamental purposes. Various off-producing nations are "flaring" burning as waste 4.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas each year. That is 10 times more natural gas than the United States uses each year to produce nitrogen fertilizer and it is enough to produce double the current world consumption of nitrogen fertilizer.

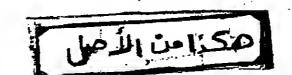

When the oil-producing nations made their price and production decisions last winter, they did not intend to produce a fertilizer shortage to discombobulate the world agricultural industry, and to expose millions to famine. But the fact that this great evil was unintended will not make any. one's life easier, or longer.

The President of Venezuela Responds to The President of The United States

HIS EXCELLENCY
PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
THE WHITE HOUSE

Caracas September 19, 1974

I have read with careful attention and particular interest the mofficial version of your speech to the United Nations General Assembly. I hasten to inform you that your words hold a clear significance for Venezuela because our country has been an indefatigable and resolute defender of international petroleum prices over the last 15 years and has not failed to involve itself in the just controversy over the world raw materials situation in order to defend the position of our countries in respect of the so-called terms of trade. The great world forum in which you chose to present the views of the Government of the United States on the most important issues which today affect or preoccupy all the peoples of the world makes it possible and advisable for me to communicate with you publicly and directly, rather than through the customary diplomatic channel, in order to inform you of my Government's reaction to the views expressed by the United States Government.

For many decades, we in Latin America have persistently demanded just and equitable treatment by the developed countries and primarily, of course, by our neighbor and traditional friend, the United States of America. We have repeatedly pointed to the impoverishment of our countries as dependants of the North American economy. Before the energy crisis and before petroleum prices reached the levels at which they stand today, the raw materials produced by our countries were purchased year after year at prices which were never in proportion to or in equilibrium with the prices of the manufactured goods which our countries require for their development and which have been purchased largely in the United States, not only for geographical reasons but also because of the credits tied to the United States economy that have traditionally been made

Each year we, the countries which produce collect, meat, tin, copper, iron or petroleum, have been hairding over a larger amount of our products in order to obtain imports of machinery and other manufactured goods, and this has resulted in a constant and growing outlow of capital and impoverishment of our countries.

In Latin America, as in the other developing countries, we can assert that the developed countries have been taking advantage of the fundamental needs of the Latin American. Asian or African man. To cite the particular case of Venezuela, petroleum prices showed a steady decline for many years, while our country was obliged to purchase manufactured goods from the United States at ever-higher prices, which, day after day, restricted even further the possibilities of development and well-being for Venezuelans.

The establishment of the Organization of Petroleum Experting Countries (OPEC) was a direct consequence of the developed countries' use of a policy of outrageously low prices for our raw meterials as a weapon of economic oppression. In a series, this fact demonstrates the truth of your statement to the United Nations that any attempt by a country to use a product for political pusposes will inevitably tempt other countries to use their products for their own purposes. At this very time, we are seeing how the refusal of the developed countries, including the United States of America, to agree to just and fair prices for soffee has resulted in the inaction of the International Coffee Organization, which was established presisely to achieve a satisfactory and just equilibrium between producers and consumers. The coffee producing countries of Latin America and Africa will lose roughly 30 per cent of their foreign-exchange cernings, while manufactured goods from the developed nations have doubled or tripled in price.

The world food crisis is a consequence, inter alia, of the high prices at which the developed nations sell us agricultural and industrial machinery and other inputs essential to agriculture and the growth of our economies.

My Government shares the view which you expressed before the United Nations General Assembly, that a world of economic confrontation cannot be a world of political co-operation. The economic confrontation has been created by the major Powers, which refuse to allow the developing countries equal participation in the search for an indispensable balance in the terms of trade. Within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), Venezuela has not used and will not use its energy resources as a political weapon because that is not and never has been the purpose for which that organization was established; rather, its purpose was to protect the basic wealth extracted from our subsoil at prices that have never compensated for the costs of our imports and of the technology needed for our development.

Venturing to interpret the policy of OPEC, I would assure you that it is the hope of our petroleum-producing countries that an agreement between the countries producing raw materials and the industrialized countries which will be equitable and bring international justice can be reached, through a world body such as the United Nations, with a view to striking a proper and acceptable balance between the prices paid to us for the labor of the men and women of our poverty-stricken countries and those paid by our economies for the imports we require.

This policy of our country—which is supported by all parties and all segments of opinion and by our people—has been developed as part of our national education which conveys and disseminates the conviction that Venezuela is an oil country producing and selling an increasingly valuable, scarce and strategically vital commodity. We see no other way to confront the economic totalitarianism that has been coming to the fore in business and world trade and portends as much evil for the world as was threatened by political totalitarianism in the form of Nazi fascism, against which your great country fought, rendering the world a heroic and splendid service that earned the gratitude of all mankind.

The World Food Conference which FAO is preparing to hold in November will not be able to achieve its lofty objectives if we in the developing countries do not succeed in guaranteeing remunerative prices for the raw materials we produce, prices that are in the necessary and fitting balance with the prices of the manufactured goods we import.

I would remind Your Excellency that in the various international forums that have been set up to study the great inequalities and injustices prevailing in international trade, the developed countries have undertaken to contribute 1 per cent of their national product to the developing countries. This target has never been achieved. Our country is prepared, as it has consistently demonstrated, to make its economic contribution, but we demand and hope that the powerful countries will provide the co-operation to which they have committed themselves. It is our countries that have always borne the unacceptable burdens of international trade. Our complaints and demands have never been heeded, and our legitimate aspirations have been frustrated. It is a well-known fact, confirmed by figures provided by organizations of recognized and indisputable authority in the world, that oil prices account for only an insignificant percentage of production costs in the United States and

My Government has a sincere interest in maintaining the most cordial and fruitful relations with your Government, and to this end we engage in co-operative efforts in keeping with the interests of our country and the protection of our economy, particularly with regard to the management of our natural resources. On a previous occasion, on 15 July 1974, replying to a memorandum from the United States Embassy in Caracas, I gave instructions to the Venezuelan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to dispatch a memorandum of reply which is being made public today and in which my Government expressed the concerns that I have recapitulated in the present message, namely, the lack of understanding between the major developed countries, including your own, and our countries in regard to the need to arrive at satisfactory formulas for equal treatment and mutual respect in economic matters with a view to safeguarding the interests of each country in ensuring the well-being of its people.

In view of your important statement in the United Nations, I wish to place on public record this statement of Venezuela's position and the willingness of my Government to work in an international forum to establish a balanced relationship between the raw materials produced by our countries, on the one hand, and the manufactured goods and technology, on the other, which are possessed by the developed countries and are in essence the source of economic marginality and growing powerty in which over half of mankind continues to live.

Venezuela perforce takes a sympathetic view of any attempt at finding solutions to the great problems of our time in global terms, but only if a global perspective does not mean that the large countries will prevail over the small countries. It would be dangerous, ineffective and harmful for global and universal solutions to lose sight of the fact that the world includes us as well. It cannot be supposed, Mr. President, that consumers are limited to one part of the world. I share your hope and wish that petroleum-producing and petroleum-conseaming countries will arrive at broad, sensible, sound, lasting and equitable agreements. It is my aim in this message, .Mr. President, to convey my thoughts and feelings to you in all candor, which cannot and should not be interpreted, by any means, as a hostile reaction to what you said in your important message to the United Nations. However, it seems to me, as President of Venezuela, that I am contributing to good relations between our countries in sending you the clearest and most representative statement of our Latin American interests, which is not incompatible or in conflict with the national interest of your country or of any other nation that wishes to act within the true limits of international justice and not of unilateral domination.

You may count on the co-operation and support of Venezuela, a country with a history of long and continuing friendship for your own, in seeking to achieve the abovementioned objectives.

Accept, Sir, the assurances of my highest consideration.

The Brisk Activities on the Boulevards

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS, Sept. 26 (IHT).—Activity is brisk on the boulevards: François Périer, returned from the movies, is in "Le Tube" at the Théstre Antoine, and Robert Hirsch, having quit the Comédie-Française, has opened in "Monsieur Amilcar" at the Bouffes-Parisiens.

"Le Tub:" comes from the facile pen of Françoise Dorin, who has written five hits in a row and is an expert box office diagnostician. That she has tailored her new play for Périer is obvious enough, but one suspects that he-having directed it, too—made a few alterations. His big scene just before the intermission recalls his monologue in one of his earlier triumphs—the Bobosse" of Roussin.

He is presented here as a middis-aged professor whose son be-comes a pop-music idol just as his father, after wearying years in the classroom, has his first book accepted for publication. The generation gap between the two is bridged by mutual affection, but the gap between success as a rock star and literary recognition rankles a bit, the scholarly father being almost totally eclipsed by his virtually illiterate offspring.

The big scene occurs when the professor, visited by a young pupil Ceric Remy as the cheeky tot merits a round of applause), explains himself with resigned melancholy, acting out an imaginary interview with his now famous son. It is Périer's histrionic high moment, but Miss Dorin's gifts shine brighter in

Her writing is at its best and most confident in brief, funny There is the sequence in which the sadistic editor (finely caricatured by Pascal Mazzotti) keeps the poor professor on tenacceptance of his book. There are the visits of the professor to his mother (enacted with delightful élan by Denise Gray) and there is the skit in which the professor and a workman, plastering up posters of the new rock favorite, the professor's son, discuss fame and fortune.

With Périer's directorial col-Isboration and the ingenious shifting decor of Hubert Monloup, all moves smoothly and rapidly and with precision.

It is Yves Jamiaque's misfortune that he was not born Luigi Pirandello or, if that could not be arranged, Jean Anonilla. His "Monsieur Amilcar" is a weak distilling of the Italian's "Henry IV" and "Tonight We accountant, embezzles funds to realize a drama of his dreams. For its dramatis personae he engages an actress-between engagements—to impersonate his wife, a hippie girl to be his daughter and one of the unemployed to be his friend and confidant. A mother-in-law (perfectly played by Madeleine Barhulée with comic turmoil) is thrown in free.

Mr. Amilcar, a drab and lonely

His scheme operates to his bap-plest expectations at first, but his salaried players are just salaried players and the emotional security he has sought explodes to give tragic results. In selecting this vehicle for its debut in the commercial theater, Robert Hirsch displays gallantry but odd showmanship. The play's most rewarding role is not his, but that of the duty actress whom Judith Macre portrays to magnificent effect. Hirsch, more subdoed than at the Comédie-Française, conveys the pathos of the lost man who yearns in vain for friendship and understanding. Clad in a business suit, he roams the art-nouvesu drawing room phantom-like dreamer confronted with harsh reality. There is sound support from Jacques Sereys as hired companion who has ambitions of his own and by Annie Boudard and Jean-Luc Moreau as the boisterous representatives of the younger generation. Jacques Charon has directed with his customary skill, but is unable to camouflage the straining of the script to rise above imitation.

So it follows that Mr. Rauschenherg, whose paintings can command six figures, has often been a soft touch with hard cash for artists still struggling along the road to success.

Until four years ago, he would delve into his pocket to assist young artists battling financial emergencies. Then he thought of a more organized way to help and founded Change, Inc., where established artists could help those not yet recognized.

Entertainment in New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (IHT). -This is how The New York Times critics rate new films:

"Amarcord" may be Federico

Fellini's most marvelous film. says Vincent Canby. 'It's an extravagantly funny, sometimes dreamlike evocation of a year in the life of a small Italian coastal town in the 1930s, not as it literally was, perhaps, but as it is recalled by a director with a superstar's access to the resources of the Italian film industry and a piper's command over our imaginations." "Amarcord" has a sort of narrator-hostmaster of ceremonies who watches over everything, says Canby. He's called the lawyer (Luigi Rossi) and is a scholarly, pedantic fellow with a fondness for historical dates. There is no single central character, but an uproariously unruly procession of them—including Titta (Bruno Zanin), a boy in his teens; Titta's father (Armando Brancia), a terrible - tempered construction foreman; Gradisca (Magali Noel), the town hairdresser, a silly pretty, immaculately groomed femme fatale; Titta's grandfather (Guiseppe Lanigro) and his crazy uncle (Ciccio Ingrasia).

"Antonia: A Portrait of the Weman" is a superb documentary about conductor Antonia Brico, says Nora Sayre. "It details the achievements and the struggles that began for a child who was first taught plano because bit her nails-and continues for the 73-year-old who now leads a community orchestra in Denver." Directed by Judy Col-lins, singer, and Jill Godmilow, film maker, the film is at the Whitney Museum of American Art. When she was 28, critics called Dr. Brico a great con-ductor," says Sayre. "After direct-ing the Berlin Philharmonic, she twice conducted the Motropolitan Opera. Ovations ensued, Lut she was denied a third concert because John Charles Thomas, the baritone, wouldn't work with a woman. Between 1934 and 1937, she assembled and conducted a women's symphony, which thrived until she tried to convert it into an ensemble of both sexes ... The press had eagerly quoted Dr. Brico when she said that 'Art is sexless,' or when José Iturbi sneered at women musicians. But when she simply performed as an artist she wasn't sizzling copy. 'Antonia' is biographical cinema at its best, and it will also encourage many women in fields other than music, thanks to Dr. Brico's determination, her refusal to be defeated."

"Seenes From a Marriage." Ingmar Bergman's latest film, was praised in superlative terms by the critics Vincent Camby says: "This superb Bergman film, starring the incomparable Liv Ullmann and Briand Josephson as lovers who don't always know it, is the first major event of the actumn film season . . . Under Bergman's direction and with his material, Miss Ullmann again establishes herself as one of the most fascinating actresses

On Liquidity

Cites Currency Outflow For 4.1-Billion Move

FRANKFURT, Sept. 26 (AP-DJ).—West Germany's central bank acted today to increase the mount of money available to mercial bank: to compensate currency outflows since Bundesbank president Karl Klasen said the increase of 4.1 billion deutsche marks in liquid-ity would be brought about by cutting by 8 per cent the minimum reserve requirement applied to commercial banks. This requires banks to hold a certain amount of money interest free at the central bank.

Mr Klasen said that the lowering of the minimum reserve re-quirements becomes effective

Helmut Schlesinger, a member of the Bundesbank council, said that since June 1 liquidity in the banking system had been reduced by about 14.5 hillion marks 7.5 billion of which through foreign exchange intervention

Mr. Klasen said the Bundesbank's action to increase liquidity was kept to a minimum to avoid jeopardizing the expected decline in the rate of inflation.

He said that it can now be said with certainty that the inflation rate will be lower next year, but he noted that this is besed on the assumption that there will be no drastic economic downturn internationally.

Pay Claim Warning

FRANKFURT, Sept. 26 (Reuters).—The 14 per cent pay claim lodged this wekk by 220,000 IG Metall from and steel workers in North-Rhine - Westphalia, should not be seen as a model for claims in other less healthy branches of the economy, Mr. Klasen said.

However, recent discussions at meetings of the Concerted Action Committee gave him the impression both sides recognized that pay claims which are permissible in "boom" sectors would be unwelcome in ailing industries, he told a press conference.

Apel Stresses Stability

BONN, Sept. 26 (Reuters) .-Both the United States and West sure to reflate their economies during the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund next week, but Germany will not abandon the priority it places on price stability, Finance Minister Hans Apel said today.

He told journalists the IMF's annual report makes clear that inflation control is still the central problem for the industrial-

Cadbury declared an interim dividend of 2.625 per cent, unchanged. Viscount Watkinson, chairman,

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Montedison Sales Up 75%

Montedison, the giant Italian chemical group-reports that its consolidated sales topped 2400 billion lire (about $3.6 billion) in the first eight months of the year, up 75 per cent from the year-ago period. The petrochemical sector ac-counted for 1,060 billion life, up 156 per cent from the previous year. Montedison says its industrial activities showed a profit, reflecting a marked improvement in performance compared with the first eight months of 1973. This pared with the first eight months of 1973. This improvement was appreciable considering the group registered a net loss of over 25 billion fire in the first two months of this year. Two-thirds of this year's profit came from the petrochemical sector, and the rest from foreign agricultural products sales and taxtile products. The pharmaceutical sector and the seasonally-affected chain store division showed slightly unfavor-

Bowater Optimistic on Profits

Bowater, the U.K. paper products firm, expects the 36 per cent improvement in its pre-tex profits shown in the first six months to continue throughout the year. Deputy chairman Malcolm Horsmon says the group's spread of interests and substantial operations overseas should enable it better to withstand a major recession than many other British companies. He notes that the company is interested in strengthening its banking and financial services division, which is now earning profits of £1 million, by acquiring a commercial bank.

Charges for the service will be £2.50 for the first page and £1.50 for each extra page, plus value-added tax.

VW Still Interested in U.S. Plant

Rudolph Leiding, chairman of Volkswagen, says that he is still interested in setting up a VW plant in the United States, not only for assembly but for complete production. Mr. Leiding told the Stuttgart magazine Auto, Motor and Sport that prospects for Volkswagen profits are better abroad than at home. He said production costs too much in West Germany, transportation costs are too high, and there is a risk of strikes in one or more ports where Volkswagens are handled. "All this could be avoided," Mr. Leiding said, "if we first assembled and later produced in the United States. Assembly alone is not the answer." The VW chief maintains that labor and raw materials are less expensive in the United States than in Germany, and Americans work more days a year than the Germans and have a better attendance record. "We have just finished our investigations into assembly in the United States. Now we must look at the situation regarding production," Mr. Leiding said.

'Leading' U.S. Index in Sharpest Fall of '74

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP).

The U.S. government indicator designed to foreshadow future trends in the economy suffered its sharpest drop of the year in August, the Commerce Department reported today.

Most of the drop was attributed to sagging stock prices, but the index of "leading indicators" also was pushed down by the largest number of new unemployment claims for any month since March,

The Commerce Department said the overall index dropped by 1.2 per cent on the besis of figures available for 8 of the 12 components involved.

The downturn, the second so farthis year, reversed a 19 per cent jump in July and was the largest drop since a 1.7 per cent decline in December. This left the index 5.7 per cent ahead of where it was a year ago.

Four of the components in the index track the prices of vital goods, so that inflation would drive the components up automatically, even without any gain in the actual volume of goods involved.

Pierre Rinfret, head of Rinfret-Boston Associates, which conduct-

> For the moment, the government wants the scheduled and charter carriers to extend Friday's talks deadline until midnight Monday, according to government sources.

> Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar is sending a telegram to U.S. scheduled and charter airlines asking for such an extension and also inviting the carriers to a meeting here tomorrow.

If extended talks still falter Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) could set its own higher fares subject to President Ford's approval, officials said, or there could be joint U.S.-European government action to impose a new fare floor.

Airline talks collapsed early this week as the carriers considered a tentative boost estimated at 30 to 35 per cent from typical current rates and at least 70 per cent more than last year's level Failure to boost the charter rates could jeopardize an average 10 per cent fare boost for scheduled North Atlantic atrlines, according to some of the scheduled carriers. That boost, due to take effect Nov. 1, was reached by the International Air Transport Association (IATA) contingent on the adoption of higher rates by IATA's charter

UNITED NATIONS JOURNAL A Delegate's Odyssey By William F. Buckley jr. 280 pp. Putnam. $7.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

ON the surface it had all the Carmarks of a misadventure: William Buckley jr. in the United National The aliver bullet of American conservation whistling through those corridors of in-ternationalism; Why, it threatened to crode completely Mr. Buckley's monolithic image in the minds of the knee-jerk liberals (not to speak of archeonservatives) like the gentleman I met recently, a founding member of the Genghis Khan Society—the aim of which is to arrest the leftward drift of the John Birch Society, he says-who complained, The trouble with Buckley is he has all those smarts and he fools around with them." And what of the threat of the United Nations experience to Mr. Buckley's wit and clarity of expression? In the confrontation between the man and the institution, something was bound to give, and judging from other writings emanating from the United Nations, it was not likely to be the institution.

Moreover, as Mr. Buckley worked his way into the experience, it began to shape up as a misadventure. Having accepted the offer of John Scali, the U.S. representative, to be the delegate specializing in human rights during the 28th General Assembly and having convinced himself that he would be able to say a thing or two that was on his mind-indeed having fantasized that he would hold "the delegates spellbound as I read to them from Solzhenitsyn, as I described the latest account of concentration camps in Mainland China, as I pleaded the case of the ballet dancer Panov" ("I would cajole, wheedle, parry, thrust, mesmerize, dismay, seduce, intimidate."). Mr. Buckley soon found out that the law would brook no such daydreams, According to Sections 2 and 3 of the United Nations Public Participation Act, he would pretty much have to say what President Nixon directed him to say. Well, then, at least he would write a journal,

And so it all came down to "United Nations Journal: A Delegate's Odyssey," Mr. Buckley's 11th book (not counting the ones he's edited). Is the book also a misadventure? No, it is not. In it, the author keeps his colebrated wit in shape, commenting on the proceedings, thumbnalling the cast of characters. George Bush. former representative, "has about him something of the air of Elliot Richardson, leavened with the feeling that he is capable of pushing you into the swimming pool with your clothes on," and Jamil King Paisal . . . never tires of which will represent North America at the 1975 world championships in Bermuda next January has not been a member of the celebrated Aces team. He is John Swanson, of Los Angeles, who conceals a considerable will to win beneath a caim demeanor. Twice in the team trials, played recently in Washington, he found himself overextended in a contract of four spades doubled and vulnerable. The first time resulted in an 800 penalty, but the second occasion, shown in the diagram, surprised the audience. The commentators on Vu-Graph predicted another 800, but he played brilliantly to escape for down one.

Standards for vulnerable overcalls vary slightly from one partnership to another. Some experts would pass with the South hand over one diamond, influenced by the poor quality of the suit, but it is a close point.

West's jump to three clubs was pre-emptive, indicating a long, weak suit and little else, North, naturally attempted four spades, and East doubled with some plea-

West led a diamond, and South won the king in dummy and led a trump. East played the seven, and South paused to reflect. The normal play was the ten, and the audience, looking at all four hands, could see that this would lead to disaster. West would win, and if he then shifted to a heart there would be no way for South to make more than seven tricks

But South judged correctly that East must have four spades including the sce-king, and could not be prevented from making three tricks in the suit. The play of the ten was an unnecessary risk, so he put up the queen.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28 (NYT).— Overcoming a 5-0 deficit in the first inning and a 12-9 deficit in the 11th, the St. Louis Cardinals moved back into first place in the National League East last night by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 13-12, in a 3-hour 41minute struggle.

Extra-inning games appear to be the Cardinal habitat. Within the last two weeks, they won a 25inning game in New York, a 17inning affair in Philadelphia and a 12-inning battle in Pittsburgh. But three nights ago here, they lost a 10-inning 1-0 game to the Pirates, and Tuesday night fell to second place in a 7-3 loss.

One more defeat would have left them a game and a half behind with only six to play, but they averted that twice. They wiped out Pittsburgh's five-run first with a six-run third, and when the Pirates pulled even in the fifth, the Cards answered with a three-run burst for a 9-6 lead. But Pittsburgh scored two in the sixth and tied the score in the ninth with an uncarned run. They apparently won the game been pitching for St. Louis since the fifth. But in scoring three runs, the Pirates had removed Dave Giusti, their ace reliever, for a pinch-hitter (who started the rally with a bunt single). Now they had to rely on Juan Jimines, a 25-year-old right-hander with a total of three innings of major league experience. It wasn't enough. Ted Sizemore singled, Reggia Smith walked, and Ted Simmons doubled to right center. Suddenly it was 12-10 with the tying runs in scoring position, and manager Danny Murtaugh called in Jim Minshall, a tall 27-year-old with less than two innings of major league exposure. He, like Jiminez, had been added to the roster in September when the limit went from 25 to 40 men.

Minshall had good stuff, but bad luck. He made Joe Torre hit n grounder to the right side, only to have Rennie Stennett throw wildly past first, letting the tying runs score and the winning run get to second. When Bake Mc-Bride tried to bunt the runner to third, he did it so well that he beat it out for a hit.

With the infield playing in, Minshall struck out Ken Reitz, but he couldn't stop Jim Dwyer, pinch - hitting, from hitting a long fly to right. It was cought, but Larry Herndon, running for Torre, scored easily from third and an ecstatic group of Cardi-nals surrounded him at home

Yanks Stay Close

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (NYT). The New York Yankees stayed alive last night when Elliott Maddox's single enabled them to scrounge out a 1-0 victory over the Bostoo Red Sox in 10 innings and cling to their posttico half a game behind tha first-place Baltimore Orioles the American League East with only five to play.

It was the final game of the season for the Yankees in Shea Stadium-their home away from home-unless they should somehow survive the next six days on the road and return for tha playoff for the American League pennant.

Last night was also scoreboard watching at its best because the teams were locked in a scoreless duel-Doc Medich pltching for New York and Bill Tee for Boston-when they got the bad news: the Orioles had rallied to defeat the Detroit Tigers in the ninth inning in Baltimore.

"I was a little disappointed." confessed manager Bill Virdon, a man given to understatement. "If you lose this one now, you're really hurting. Hell, we've got to win because I don't figure Baltimore to lose."

But they were still scoreless until the Yankee pieced together the run in the 10th on a sequence of small things.
Sandy Alomar led off with a bunted him to second base. Then Roy White, the designated-hit-ter, topped a pitch that bounced high off the grass-pardon the expression, a Baltimore chopand beat it out while Lee was waiting for it to come down. Now the winning run stood 90 feet away with only one out, but Maddox shorteoed the suspense by bouncing the next pitch between third base and shortstop for his third hit of the night.

At Kansas City, Andy Hassler and Orlando Pena collahorated on a seven-hitter and Morris Nettles stole bome, carrying California to a 7-0 victory over the Royals. Indians 8, Brewers 3

At Cleveland, pinchhitter Jack Broahamer smashed a three-run double in the fourth inning, powering the Indians to an 8-3 victory over Milwaukee. Twins I, A's 0

At Oakland, Calif., Bert Blyleven pitched a four-hitter and Stave Brye drove in the game's only run with a double in the fourth inning, leading Minnesota to a 1-0 victory over the A's. The loss cut the A's lead to 4 1'2 games over second-place Texas in the Americao League West and left Oakland'a magic oumber for clinching a fourth consecutive division title at four.

New Faces Help WFL Clubs More Than Change of Cities

ALL GONE—George Foreman points toward his right

eyebrow to show that the cut he suffered last week in a training accident has neatly and quickly healed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (UPI).— The World Football League is finding out that changing cities doen't make winners but changing the lineup does.

The WFL, which has been moving franchises like chess pieces the past two weeks, made its first appearance in Shreveport, La., last night when the transplanted Houston Texans made their home debut. The team bore a oew name, the Shreveport Steamer, but its play was the same as the Memphis Southmen rolled to a 17-3 victory.

Portland, meanwhile, didn't change its home. One of tha patsies of the league early in tha season, the Storm, under coach Dick Coury, almost completely revamped its roster with National Pootball League dropouts and the club suddenly is competitive. The Storm last night proved their new status by npaetting tha Birmingham Americans, the top club in the WFL, 26-21, on Pete Beathard's 16-yard touchdown pass to tight-end Bob Christiausen with 35 seconds left to play. Southern California crushed the financially-troubled Jacksondelphia Bell edged the Hawaiians, 21-16, in the only other action. Portland's Mary Kendricks ran nine yards for a score and Beathard plunged one for another and a 15-0 lead. Matthew Reed's 24-yard TD pass to Denis Homan cut it to 15-7 but Booth Lusteg's 19-yard field goal gave the Storm an 18-7 lead at the half. The Americans, now 11-2, rallied to take the lead in the sec-ond half as Gerard Williams re-turned ao interception 21 yards for one score and Charlie Harraway blasted over from the ona with 2:08 left to play. Beathard, cut by Kansas City of the NFL last month, then moved tha Storm into positioo for the winning TD pass. George Mira's pass into the end zone for Birmingham was incomplete as time ran out. putting Portland's record at 4-8-1

Rookie Dan White, subbing for injured John Huarte, threw a 19yard TD pass to Roger Wallace and Willie Speocer ran two yards for another score as the South-meo spoiled Shreveport's debut before a disappointing crowd of 21.357. The Sharks haven't heen paid in a month and they played like it last oight. Tony Adams threw TD passes of 16 yards to Ike Harrs and five to James McAliste: and ran 26 yards for aoother score before 22,017 fans.

Gerry Warren kicked field goods of 23 and 32 yards in the final period and Philadelphia's defense made it stand up with four pass interceptions before 14,497 in

The Hick

By Russell Baker

YORK.—Lindbergh just did it. Fans and children of the 1970s were astounded. Evel Kn.:vel was astounded, too. So were the press and television and Muhammad Ali and Bobby

They all told him it was antique to just do it.

"Nobody just dnes it any more, Lindy," the closed-circuit television psople warned him. "Nowndays you just talk about

Lindbergh was 10th-rate at talk His long suit was grinning So ha climbed into his overloaded airplane with no front window and just did it.

All the way to France.

When he landed at Le Bourget outsids Paris he was greeted two wire service reporters and an irritated airport electrician who had had to work late that evening because his boss had heard Lindbergh was flying the Atlantic and might need the runway lights turned on so he could see

The reporters' first question "Why did you just do it, Lindy?"

Lindbergh grinned.

Their second question was: Don't you know that nobody just does it any more?" "Is this France?" Lindbergh replied

Next day, several American papers carried a three-paragraph story about it. A man named Lindbergh, the stories said, had done a strange thing. Nobody had eyer flown solo from New York to Paris before, and now Lindbergh has done it, just like that. He had no excuse for his failure to talk about it for nine months beforehand. He had just simply gone shead and done it. On his return to the States.

Lindbergh was still unrecognized except for a few fans of transatlantic flight who were embittered because he had taken all the excitement out of the big event by just doing it.

Destitute and unable to buy airplane fuel, he was finally rescued from obscurity by Malcolm Bascom, the entrepreneurial genius who understood the age in which we live.

Under Bascom's direction, Lindbergh agreed to spend two years talking about his deter-mination to whip the Atlantic in solo flight or die in the attempt. Gafortunately, Lindbergh had so little talk that he had to be accompanied everywhere by a publicity agent who said that Lindbergh was concentrating so completely on his coming struggle with the Atlantic that he was unable to speak.

Public interest had just begun to stir in the Lindbergh promotion when Bascom voung aviator and a television crew to the oceanside airport from which the flight' would begin.

It was Bascom's intention to get some publicity film of Lindbergh shaking his fist at the ocean and wading in to punch the waves, but the airplane had been wheeled out for the photosraphers too and the sight of it distracted Lindbergh.

"Kiddo," said Bascom, "what we will do on the big day is this. You will start to take off and stop halfway down the runway, and come back and say the engine has a serious ping in it and will have to be rebuilt which will take eight months, which will give us an even longer period of buildup in which to fleece Lindbergh gripned and climbed into the airplane and turned on the engine.

He was airborne three minutes later and 33 1/2 hours later he was in Paris, Bascom was furious when he reached him by tele-

"You can't just do it, you dilapidated antique," Bascom shouted.

"I can't help myself," grinned Lindbergh.

On his return to the States, he was jeered through the streets as a hick who was too dumb to handle a big-tims hustle. His apologists said his only fault was that he had been unable to shrink with the times.

Wild horses being driven toward hidden corral in Oregon.

Wild Horses vs. the Mechanized Cowboy

By Andrew H. Malcolm

SWAMP CREEK FIELD, Ore. (NYT).-For 94 wild horses ending their cool night's slumber, there was no indication that the new day would be any different from the thousands of other days they have roamed freely in this rugged southeastern section of Oregon.

But winding their way down from town many miles away was a long caravan of men in machines. They had ropes. And by the time the blue sky gave way again to the stara, seven wild horses were missing from the band.

The controversial roundup—complete with lassos and yelling, albeit radio-equipped, wranglers—had begun. The roundup is necessary, officials of the Federal Bureau of Land Management said, because the wild-horse population is too big to be supported-along with cattle, sheep and oth wildlife—by the food on the available land, especially with livestock producers turning away from expensive feed grains to cheaper grass feeding.

For centuries these horses, distant ndants of the Spanish mustangs, had the West to themselves. The wild horse has no natural enemy—except man-so his numbers grew to two million by 1900.

Settlers captured some to ride. Then more recently, cowhands caught the wild animals to sell for 12 cents a pound to be ground into pet food. With the advent of airplanes, helicopters and motorcycles, that became easier. But it led to gury abuses. And by 1970 only 16,000 wild horses remained.

The next year, Congress passed the Wld Horse and Burro Act, prohibiting roundups by machine and the commercial sale of these animals. A widely publicized illegal roundup was held two years later, in January, 1973, near Howe, Idaho. Men in helicopters and snowmobiles ran a herd of wild horses toward a cliff. Twelve dived over and died. Other were caught in rocks. Their throats were allt or their legs wers cut off with saws. Thirty-four were sent to a Nebraska slaughterhouse, where a court order saved them. Half died of neglect anyway. There were no prosecutions.

Since 1971, some federal officials contend, the nation's Western wild-horse population has mushroomed to 42,666, including once-tame horses set free owners. And the bands are growing 20 per cent a year, they say.

Conservationists dispute both figures strongly. But under the 1971 law, "excess" animals may be rounded up and distributed on a caretaker basis to willing citizens, although there is no enforcement machinery to prevent a sale or abuse. ek, for the first time under the new law, the Bureau of Land Management began its roundup. There will be many more throughout the West in the weeks and months ahead. And there are new proposals to allow again the use of vehicle and planes to gather the herds. There are reportedly 2,100 wild horses wandering Oregon's vast rolling range country. The federal government owns 3.5 million acres in Harney County, much of it leased by the bureau to 343 ranchers. They say the land is overgrazed. So, on a recent day before dawn, the caravan set out from the town of Burns. Columns of thick dust rose into the sky behind the wheels, the first indication to the horses that something was afoot. The animals could be seen running the ridges. As usual, one mare led three or four others with their colts. The stallion brought up the rear, keeping his "wives" in place.

Soon in the distance came faint whoops and hollers. Dust in the sky. A slight thundering sound. Then over the hill they cams. Perhaps two dozen wild horses galloping through the rising heat waves, their shaggy manes and tails standing not in the horses," tame animals trained to run to the corral, theoretically leading the wild herd with them. Behind and beside the band rode cowhands, yelling and waving to keep the horses "steered" toward the federal government 0. Two more attempts failed. Then, just before 4 o'clock four wild horses seeking to evade two cowboys ran straight in the gate. Another was roped. Two more were driven in. And dusk fell. Plans called for the rest of the bands to be captured and taken to the Harney County Fairgrounds. There, the 20 best horses 10 mares, six stallions and four colts-were to be separated and returned to the range. The deadline for applicants seeking the remaining 74 horses from the bureau's

All went well for the men until near the gate the wild horses summoned a burst of extra energy and escaped. Twice more that happened with other bends. The saddle horses were tiring. The score at lunchtime stood: Wild horses 3.

Burns office passed this week. Each individual had to promise to care for the animal. But since some of the 60 applica-tions came from as far away as Maine and New Jersey and since the law provides for no inspectors, officials conceded that enforcement would be nonexistent.

A Letter From Reagan PEOPLE: To Edmund Brown

In an effort to help the Repub-lican candidate running to suc-ceed him, Calif. Gov. Rouald Reagan recently sent out a raft of those computer-written letters politicians now rely on to appeal for financial help. Praising his candidate, Houston Flourney, Reagan, in his computer letter, said, "Remember when Pat Brown and Jesse Unruh ran things in Sacramento? You'd rather forget it? So would I." One recipient of the letter was Edmund (Pat) Brown, the Democratic former governor, who was only half amused. "I must refuse your kind invitation to contribute," he wrote Reagan, explaining that he plans to vote for the Democratic candidate, who happens to be his son, Edmund Brown jr. . . . .

OPINION POLL: According to a Swedish newspaper survey, King Carl XVI Gustaf should continus to have the right to drive a car but not to take part in races. The controversy over the 28-year-old King's driving was stirred up when he skidded off a track Tuesday while testing E modified racing car. He was not injured. The track was wet and the King failed to make a curve and ended up in the grassy infield. Thursday, the Stockholm newspaper Expressen conducted a telephone survey among a cross section of Swedes and came up with the headline: "Sure the King Should Continue to Drive-But Not in Races."

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Warren Burger, injured in a bicycle aecident Friday night, left Bethesda Naval Hospital Thursday, A Supreme Court spokesman said that Burger will recuperate for several days away from Washington, But the chief justice plans to be on the bench when the court begins its 1974-1975 term Oct. 7.

PERMISSION GRANTED: The British Broadcasting Corp. has given actor David Niven permission to read uncensored excerpts of his autobiography, "The Moon's a Balloon," as an eight-part series. The book includes Niven's youthful meeting and long-lasting friendship with a good-hearted prostitute.

Without debate or fanfare, the House Judiciary Committee

Keyslond King Carl XVI Gustaf ... should he race?

Thursday approved a bill that would allow girls to play Little League baseball. The bill would change the 10-year-old incorporation of Little League Baseball Ioc. to refer to "boys and girls" instead of "boys" and "citizenship and sportsmanship" instead of "citizenship, sportsmanship and manhood." A similar measure to end discrimination in the Naval Sea Cadet Corps was also sent to the floor by the committee.

SUED: The Divine Light Mission Inc., church of the Guru Makaraj. Ji, by the Astrodome-Astroball Stadium Corp., of Houston, which says that the mission owes it $14,500 in unpaid rent. The corporation claims in a suit filed Monday that the church still owes that amount on a promissory note signed Nov. 15, 1973, when the 16-year-old guru and self-proclaimed perfect master" used the Astrodome for "Millentum "73," a religious festival which was supposed to usher in an era of peace on earth. The corporation also seeks interest on the amount plus legal fees. A spokesman for the Denver-based mission said that the church has tried to pay the $14,500 by monthly installments of $3,000. He said that the corporation returned a $3,000 check mailed in March.
